of a holiday game of base-ball, Alfred Mayer, a ten-year-old son of Ocean Mayer, of South Allentown, is dead, and Francis Sterner, the innocent cause of the death, may become hopelessly insane.

Storner is forty-three years of age and is in the habit of playing with the children of the neighborhood.

Yesterday he went out with a number of boys to have a game of ball. Moyer made a hit and got to third base, and was on the way home as the pitcher, threw the ball to Sterner, who was at bat. Sterner struck for the ball, but missed, hitting Moyer squarely on the head, crushing his skull like an egg. The injured boy was carried to his home where he died within a few minutes.

Sterner was wrought up to distraction by the result of the accident, and in his frenty attempted to drown himself in a near by stream, but was prevented by neighbors. It is feared that he will become hopelessly insane.

They are striving to work out some plan which will accomplish this altogether worthy purpose, and which will at the same time fairly meet the views of hitherto conflicting interests.

What is going on in other Southern cities in the matter of annexation is having a stimulating effect upon Richmond citizens and councilmen, and with the efforts of Norfolk and the splendid strides of Nashville already accomplished, there is a widespread public feeling that Virginia's capital should not remain behind in the race.

Nashville Up-to-Date.

Determined not to be outdone by the other cities of the South in population and progress, Nashville, Tenn., has decided to expand her territorial limits so as to take in all the contiguous territory, which is thickly populated. As she now stands in the census of the United States she ranks fourth among the cities of the South and immediately below Richmond in population being given credit for only 80,855 people. This, her people declare, is not a just representation of her actual population, and they have determined that in the next census she will be surpassed by New Orleans alone of all the cities in the South.

One of the features of the annexation bill is a clause which somewhat resembles the "Pollock amendment," offered in the Council here. It provides for exemption from increased taxation of the property in the annexed territory, until the year 1915, and reads as follows: "Seation?" Be I further enacted, that
